Chapter 1 by Parkour_Ninja

In 1872 a twelve year old boy and his father are still attempting to recover from the industrial revolution. They live in a small town in the UK near Britain. After the industrial revolution they were sent back to their hometown because they could not afford their houses rent without Timmy working. His mother has been dead since he was 5, she died of tuberculosis. Timothy decided that he wanted to help his dad make money, but he did not know how. So one day in the afternoon while walking home from school he noticed something. "Well, that's rather particular," he said.

"What's particular?" asked a passing man.

"Well, that boy just ran past a man and grabbed his wallet" explained Timmy.

"Oh! Well, that is odd, you should inform the man" suggested the passer by.

"Yes, that seems like a swell idea" Timmy said while walking too the man.

"Excuse me, sir, I believe a boy just stole your wallet" Timmy announced.

"Really, oh dear, " said the man while searching his pockets. "Was it you?"

"Oh no sir, I would never do that, " said Timmy about to gasp from the anger of being accused of such petty theft "but the boy was wearing a tan jacket and jeans, they both looked very dirty"

"Well, I guess I thank you for telling me" The man said while sulking off. Timmy continued to walk home, while thinking about it. When he got home, he grabbed his already prepared porridge, thanks to his dad, and a
